August 24, 2004

Examiners Barlow and Sun,

To further clarify our election, please take into account the following notes. Figure 1 illustrates a block diagram of the most general version of the system. You will note that it does restrict implementation of either the 'position determining means' nor the 'attitude determining means' to any diagram block (subsystem). This is because either of these subsystems may be implemented wholly within the mobile unit, or partly within the mobile unit, or entirely within the wireless network. Figures 3 and 4 are provided to illustrate this concept so the reader will have a full understanding that these subsystems may be distributed systems and are not necessarily limited to be implemented in the mobile unit.

Only claims 27 and 28, 50 and 51 are drawn to this distinction. The remaining claims fit perfectly within the single general class set forth as claim 1. Accordingly, we now request examination of claims 1 – 26; 29 – 49; 52- 129.

Sincerely,

Joseph Page
